TROOPS AWAIT U. S. MOVE IN PANAMA

FIGHTING CHECKED IN DISPUTED AREA BY HUGHES' NOTE

U. S. FAVORS COSTA RICA'S CLAIM IN SQUABBLE OVER TERRITORY; MARINES ON WAY TO CENTRAL AMERICA.

(By Associated Press)

Panama, Aug. 23—Panama's reply to the latest note from Secretary of State Hughes in which Panama was told the disputed territory along the Costa Rican frontier of this country would be placed under the jurisdiction of Costa Rica, has been considered by the Panaman cabinet, and possibly will be delivered on Wednesday.

American diplomatic officials are reticent regarding the situation, but it is known that Panama's reply has not been sent to Washington.

Although it is generally reported that armed forces have already been ordered to advance on Coto in the disputed area with a view to opposing possible Costa Rican occupation of the district, the latest official declaration here indicates that troops have been dispatched to Divid, a town some distance from the boundary.

The Panama government, it is understood will await further advice from Washington before taking any decided steps.

Follows Series of Notes

Transportation of American marines followed the dispatch of a note Aug. 18 by Secretary of State Hughes to the government of Panama, clearly revealing that American patience with Panama had been exhausted. On May 2 Hughes had sent a note to Panama upholding the right of Costa Rica to the region in question. In this same note he stated a limited time would be given Panama to negotiate with Costa Rica as to the manner in which Costa Rica was to take over jurisdiction. At that time it was Hughes' opinion that 60 days would be sufficient. Much more time was finally given, however, so his note of last Thursday reads:

"Inasmuch as a reasonable time for reaching an agreement has already been afforded, there seems to be no reason why the government of the United States should, as the friendly mediator between the two governments, or by virtue of its special relations to the government of Panama, feel compelled to suggest to the government of Costa Rica that it delay longer taking jurisdiction over the territory which is now occupied by Panama, and which was adjudged to belong to Costa Rica by the terms of the Loubet award."

Note Checks Fighting

Meantime Costa Rican forces moved into and took jurisdiction over territory awarded it by Chief Justice White on the Atlantic side, an award to which Panama since has refused to subscribe.

Panama therefore has been in the position of holding indisputably Costa Rican territory as a retaliatory measure against Costa Rican seizure of territory awarded it by White but claimed by Panama.

When Costa Rican forces attempted to take the Coto region also in the spring, fighting between Costa Rica and Panama opened, only to be checked by Secretary Hughes in a note demanding that hostilities cease. He further instructed that Panamanian forces be withdrawn from the Coto region, but this Panama refused to do. Hughes has consistently upheld the White award which established a boundary between Panama and Costa Rica, giving Costa Rica added territory.

CATHOLIC CHARITIES DRIVE NETS $15,200

WISCONSIN RAPIDS COMMUNITY DONATES MORE THAN PRESCRIBED QUOTA; OTHER DIOCESES GO OVER TOP.

The result of the Catholic Charities drive which was started here about a month ago, is very satisfactory, it was stated this morning. $15,200 has so far been subscribed, with a number of cards still outstanding, and a number of the surrounding villages not yet reported in. SEVEN VETERANS OF OLDEST G. A. R. POST VISIT CITY

MEMBERS OF BERLIN, WIS., POST, FIRST IN THE COUNTRY, VISIT COMRADE GEORGE McMILLAN HERE.

Seven aged Civil War veterans, from 75 to 91 years of age, members of the oldest G. A. R. post in the country, were visitors in Wisconsin Rapids today. The ranks of the John H. Williams Post, Berlin, Wis. are growing thinner as the years roll by, but it is the custom of the veterans of the post, the parent of all G. A. R. posts, to take an outing once a year. This year's number was seven, and they came by automobile from Berlin to visit an old comrade, a brother in arms and a member of the same post, George McMillan, of this city.

A little less active than in former days, with backs slightly bent by the weight of years, with hands that faltered occasionally, the seven proud old veterans got out of their automobiles in front of the Witter at the end of their long journey up the state. The seven members of the post who were able to make the trip were A. R. Parker, A. L. Tucker, Pat O'Brien, W. M. Eldred, David Evans, Samuel Priest, and George W. Morton. They were driven here by Percy Talbert and Ben Weitke business men of Berlin.

See Improvements in City

"It was a fine trip," said Mr. Morton, commander of the Berlin G. A. R. post and city treasurer at that place. "I was in Wisconsin Rapids for seven weeks eight years ago, and I can see a big change for the better in the city. The parks and river banks have been greatly beautified and you have some fine new buildings."

Mr. Morton is the founder of the Liberty War Veterans of the World organized on December 22, 1918.

"This is not my first visit to your city," said A. R. Parker, another of the visiting veterans. "I have been here quite frequently and am much impressed by the improvements I have noted."

Back To The Straight And Narrow

"We came up here by a mighty crooked road," said Mr. Evans, with a twinkle in his eye, "but I guess we'll go back by the straight and narrow."

A. L. Tucker, quartermaster of the Berlin post and a member of since September, 1866, also expressed his pleasure at being in the city "I haven't seen very much of Wisconsin Rapids, but my first impressions of it and of the drive up here are very good ones."

After a short visit with Mr. McMillan, at which Civil war days were revived in an exchange of stories the old soldiers left the city for Berlin this afternoon.

MILLIONS OF FISH DIE IN WISCONSIN LAKES

Birchwood, Wis.—Due to the lack of oxygen in the water, millions of fish in lakes throughout Wisconsin have died this summer, Brayton O. Webster, conservation commissioner reports. Hot weather and lack of winds are given as the cause.

River fish in this section apparently have gone through the heat wave without suffering, Mr. Webster said On the lakes, however, the still, hot weather largely cut off the supply of oxygen for the water and resulted in a general killing of fish

This same condition exists in winter when the smaller lakes are frozen over.

NEW CHILD LABOR LAW HELD INVALID

Greensboro, N. C.—Judge James E. Boyd, in federal court, Friday, held the new federal child labor law unconstitutional.

The Owen-Keating child labor law was also held unconstitutional by Judge Body two years ago and the ruling was upheld by the supreme court of the United States.

Regulation of labor, Judge Body held, is one of the powers retained by the states and not delegated to the federal government. State child labor laws are adequate to care for the situation and provide a penalty, not a tax, as is proposed by the act of congress, the decision said.

The attempt of the federal government to regulate labor within the state is a usurpation of authority and a violation of the sovereign rights of the state, concludes the ruling.

MARSHFIELD NEWS HITS DELPHIANS

BOOK SELLING SCHEME CALLED BY EDITOR—INTELLECTUALS OPERATED IN WISCONSIN RAPIDS CLUB CIRCLES.

The Delphian Society, a well devised scheme of book selling under a guise of literary pursuit which was carried on rather unsuccessfully in Wisconsin Rapids for several days by representatives of this alleged highbrow literary society, received a rather "inglorious calling down" at the hands of the Marshfield News. According to the News, the plan to sell set of books at $65 per, didn't receive the hearty support of the Marshfield women. The may be of inerest to the local women who were interviwed by the Delphian sisters, is as follos:

The Delphian Society as near as we can learn, is an organization selling sets of books for some sixty-five dollars, the reading of which would give much in the way of higher education. Based on the assumption that people appreciate more what they have to pay for the society has that much of logic to it.

"However, in these days of substition, Marshfield women, like Marshfield men, are concerning themselves with the genuine. The University of Wisconsin has an extension department offering courses at a minimum sum, which has more students than any other university extension department in the United States. It is a bona fide institution about which there can be no doubt. It has the prestige of a state university behind it and is not maintained for profit. It is strictly modern and abreast of the times, progressing from year to year. PLAN TO ORGANIZE SERVICE BATTERY AT PORT EDWARDS

COLONEL BEVERIDGE WILL VISIT PORT EDWARDS AND NEKOOSA IN HOPES OF RECRUITING SERVICE BATTERY FROM THE TWO VILLAGES.

Lieutenant Colonel Byron Beveridge of the Wisconsin National Guard will visit this city sometime during this week in hopes of organizing a Service Battery for the 120th F. A. at Port Edwards and Nekoosa jointly. The object of forming the Service Battery, which consists of a supply depot and band, is to complete the 120th regiment of field artillery. At present a headquarters detachment is being organized at Stevens Point and will be mustered into federal service in a short time. If the Service Battery is organized the regiment will be complete with the exception of one headquarters detachment and a combat train.

To Complete Arrangements

When Battery E was organized in this city it was hoped to organize a Service Battery at the two down river villages. President L. M. Alexander of the Nekoosa-Edwards Paper Company has been interested in securing a unit for the villages and will make arrangements with Colonel Beveridge for the recruiting of a battery. At present Mr. Alexander is away but if he returns this week it is expected that all arrangements will be completed.

A Service Battery under new army standards has about the same duties as the supply company of old. The handling of all rations, clothing and supplies of all kinds falls to the Captain of the Service Battery who is the regimental supply officer. The Captain and four lieutenants, two firsts and two seconds, make up the officer personnel, the two first Lieutenants acting as battalion supply officers. One of the Lieutenants is also assistant to the regimental adjutant.

W. N. G. Leads Other States

Captain Herschleb, this city, at present is commisioned as Captain of the Service Battery, but owing to pressing business obligations it is understood that if a satisfactory commander could be found either at Nekoosa or Port Edwards he will resign his commission.

The Wisconsin national guard is reported now as leading that of all other states in the number of officers and enlisted personnel, in comparison to its population. There now are 329 officers and 5,814 enlisted men, with the state's quota under the national guard set at 10,000.

The guard completed its annual encampment last Saturday and is now preparing for its winter training.

Leo Parks, who was arrested last spring by police officer Berg for speeding and driving with an open cutout, was apprehended this morning at Port Edwards and was given 20 days in the county jail when arraigned before Judge Getts. At the time of his first arrest he was given his liberty with the understanding that he should report the next week to pay his fine. Instead of doing so he left this city and was not arrested until this morning.

YANK VETS ENLIST FOR MOROCCAN WAR

New York—Recruiting for a Spanish foreign legion for service in Morocco was in progress on Monday at the Spanish consulate here. About 250 men, who have been recruited since last Thursday, were told to be ready to leave on Tuesday for Spain. More than half of that number are Americans, veterans of the A. E. F. The rest are Spaniards and South Americans.

The office was crowded with applicants all day. Most of the Americans said frankly that they were broke and were looking more for three meals a day than any military excitement. Some of the more prosperous looking ones said they were looking for adventure and hoped to find it in the Moroccan deserts. A few wore their old army uniforms.

Nicholayson of Duluth, former president of the Ancher Shipbuilding company of Washburn, Wis. H. W. Dietrich, attorney for Tollefson failed by legal means argument to stop admission of the bomb, found in July 1919, on Nicholayson's front porch. Upon his expression of personal fear, however, the judge carefully handed the bomb to District Attorney William H. Dougherty, who carefully laid it down on the attorney's table.

The winners are now the undisputed champion of the village and are out to challenge any who may dispute their claim. Condo pitched a masterful game for the winners striking out 21 men. Huber pitched good ball until the eleventh when 4 hits and 3 errors were sufficient to push 5 runs over the rubber.

IRISH CONSIDERING DOMINION STATUS

REPUBLICAN PARLIAMENT AND SINN FEIN EXECUTIVE COUNCIL CONTINUE SESSIONS; NEW OUTBREAKS IN BELFAST.

(By Associated Press)

Dublin, Ireland, Aug., 23.—Members of the Irish Republican Parliament who gathered here today to frame a reply of that body to the British government's offer of dominion status for Ireland, divided their activities today between the secret session of the Parliament and the meeting of the executive session of the Sinn Fein.

Meetings of the two bodies were held in the Mansion House and it was believed that both would confer between theinselves in regard to the attitude of the Irish Republicans toward the terms laid down by Premier Lloyd George as a basis of settlement of the Irish controversy.

Meetings of the Sinn Fein executive committee were prohibited under plans laid down by the British government, and so far as is known the ban has never been lifted.

Outbreaks Continue

Belfast, Ireland, Aug. 23—Sunday night's bomb throwing in Tyrone street was followed up in the same area by sharp rifle and revolver firing last night. A hand grenade was also used but failed to explode.

The street lamps had been extinguished to prevent the detection of the participants in the firing.

Disturbances continued during the curfew time. Belfast is in that part of Ireland where the curfew is now in operation.

PLAN TO ORGANIZE SERVICE BATTERY AT PORT EDWARDS

COLONEL BEVERIDGE WILL VISIT PORT EDWARDS AND NEKOOSA IN HOPES OF RECRUITING SERVICE BATTERY FROM THE TWO VILLAGES.

Lieutenant Colonel Byron Beveridge of the Wisconsin National Guard will visit this city sometime during this week in hopes of organizing a Service Battery for the 120th F. A. at Port Edwards and Nekoosa jointly. The object of forming the Service Battery, which consists of a supply depot and band, is to complete the 120th. regiment of field artillery. At present a headquarters detachment is being organized at Stevens Point and will be mustered into federal service in a short time. If the Service Battery is organized the regiment will be complete with the exception of one headquarters detachment and a combat train.

To Complete Arrangements

When Battery E was organized in this city it was hoped to organize a service Battery at the two down river villages. President L. M. Alexander of the Nekoosa-Edwards Paper Company has been interested in securing a unit for the villages and will make arrangements with Colonel Beveridge for the recruiting of a battery. At present Mr. Alexander is away but if he returns this week it is expected that all arrangements will be completed.

A Service Battery under new army standards has about the same duties as the supply company of old. The handling of all rations, clothing and supplies of all kinds falls to the Captain of the Service Battery who is the regimental supply officer. The Captain and four lieutenants, two firsts and two seconds, make up the officer personnel, the two first Lieutenants acting as battalion supply officers. One of the Lieutenants is also assistant to the regimental adjutant.

W. N. G. Leads Other States

Captain Herschleb, this city, at present is commisioned as Captain of the Service Battery, but owing to pressing business obligations it is understood that if a satisfactory commander could be found either at Nekoosa or Port Edwards he will resign his commission.

The Wisconsin national guard is reported now as leading that of all other states in the number of officers and enlisted personnel, in comparison to its population. There now are 329 officers and 5,814 enlisted men, with the state's quota under the national guard set at 10,000.

The guard completed its annual encampment last Saturday and is now preparing for its winter training.

The annual All-Rotary picnic of the Rotary clubs of the Wisconsin valley will be held in Marshfield, on Monday, September 5, when the Marshfield Rotarians will be hosts to an anticipated congregation of three or four hundred visiting club members. Delegations from this city, Merrill, Wausau, Rhinelander, and Stevens Point will be present. One of the big attractions of the celebration is the baseball games between the various clubs. The local club is combing its membership for material and is confident of putting a winning team on the field when the big day comes.

Last year's gathering of the Wisconsin Valley Rotarians was held on Long Island at this city.

MOST NOTABLE CONFERENCE

Indications have not been wanting that the disarmament conference, called by President Harding to meet in Washington in November, would be a diplomatic meeting of the very first importance, but later developments strengthen this prospect. The decision of Premier Briand to attend as head of the French delegation illustrates the vast importance of the meeting in the view of the French government, and the text of the acceptance, transmitted by Ambassador Herrick, is further proof of the satisfaction with which France regards this great opportunity to discuss vital international affairs, so fraught with desirable consequences to the peoples of the world.

The French acceptance is no mere cold and formal promise to attend and take part in the discussion. It is a warm and sympathetic message, and while it naturally does not discuss the hopes and aims of the conference, or attempt to prejudice its conclusions, it may fairly be construed as extremely favorable to the end sought by President Harding and the American government. Ambassador Herrick's cable to Secretary Hughes reads: "Premier Briand authorizes me to express through you to the president his appreciation of the invitation to the Washington conference on November 11 and to say to the president that he shall have great pleasure in attending the conference in person as head of the French delegation."

The example of France will doubtless be followed by other nations, anxious to obtain as significent representation as France. Lloyd George will probably be the head of the British commissioners. In short, it looks as though the gathering of the powers at the American capital will be invested with extraordinary significance, and that its deliberations and conclusions will go down into history as one of the most notable conferences of the nations ever held since the dawn of the world.

DISILLUSIONED IN RUSSIA

Reports from Reval tell of an increasing number of arrivals there of Russian-Ammericans who were deported from this country for their un-Americanism. They are a disillusioned lot, and their one ambition is to return to the land they disgraced—an ambition doomed to failure.

These deportees have had their eyes opened and their stomachs emptied in Russia. Communism in action is not communism in a pleasant parlor discussion followed by refreshments. The old idol grows rottery when viewed closely and the fallacy of bolshevism is revealed in its hideous reality.

The more the uprising in Russia is studied the more it gives the impression of being a matchless blessing for the remainder of the world. The careless thinker in every land needed just some such demonstration to prove how wild his ideas of government were. Years and years of scholarly combat, prison sentence after prison sentence might have left some of these folks still unconvinced that bolshevism and some others of the isms were fraudulent and vain.

Apparently the enlightening process is much briefer for those who visited beknighted Russia and not much longer for those who from afar are witnessing the demoralization and decay taking place in an unhappy land. The experiment in fatuity has been an expensive one, but it probably will be a sound investment for the world, for none or few these days have the courage to stand up and demand a Russianized world.

It is always difficult to assay good from the ruins of any war, much less the world war, but it not impudent to suggest that a war which yielded a by-product like the Russian revolution, proving as it does the fallacy of bolshevism, has at least that thing to its credit. The world might have spent generations trying to determine whether that form of government was workable and not have succeeded in all that time as completely as a few short months of the the recent past have shown it a dismal failure.

The soviet government has ordered a superfluous letter stricken from the Russian alphabet. We are led to regard most everything about Russia alphabet and otherwise, as superfluous.

THE BUFFALO COMES BACK

Just when we older people have become accustomed to the thought that the buffalo, once so common in western United States, is for all practical purposes extinct, just when we are bringnig up our children to the idea that the nearest they will ever come to a buffalo is the picture of one in their school geography, it is announced on highest authority that this animal is multiplying so fast in the Yellowstone park region as to have become a problem.

We had formulated theories which explained to a nicety the cause of the decline of the buffalo. We had contented ourselves with the fact that due to man's encroaching on the domains of this animal it was now to be put into a class with the mastodon and the four-toed horses. It would be only a question of time before the real article in the way of buffalo robes would be gone from the face of the earth.

To our amazement, however, we learn that the herd in Yellowstone park is increasing so rapidly that even within the large area it will be difficult to get sufficinet food for these animals when snow covers their grazing pastures in the winter. There is every indication that the increase will be continuous, in which event it will be necessary to transfer these animals in great numbers to other parks.

Of course, they will never again become so numerous as they were in the days of Kit Carson, Buffalo Bill and Deadwood Dick. In these days the western plains swarmed with these animals; even if we liberally discount what these men have told us of the abundance of buffaloes, we are inclined to believe that it must have been next to impossible to shoot off a rifle on the western plains without hitting a half dozen buffaloes.

In those days buffaloes and buffalo hunting were American institutions. The Europeans who came to look us over but dared not venture far enough into the Wild West to sight a herd of buffaloes, had not seen all of America. Let us hope that this animal continues to increase, so that in our school geographies we need no longer write under a picture of it the sad legend, "almost extinct."

HARDING'S WISE SELECTION.

President Harding's selection of Senator Cabot Lodge as a member of the American delegation to the disarmament conference was expected by people familiar with the president's practical devotion to principle. There has not been a little chortling among certain critics of the administration who thought they had discovered signs warranting a conclusion that the Massachusetts senator was to be snubbed in this connection. But it was foregone that there would be senatorial representation on the American delegation and the logical thing was to invite the chairman of the foreign relations committee to sit in the conference. There are other senators, members of that committee, notably well equipped by learning and experience to serve the nation in this important matter, but there will be no dissatisfaction on the part of any of them that the honor, which will entail intense labor, is to go to Mr. Lodge.

The Republican conception has been that there should be no partisanship in the consideration of foreign relations and that responsibility from them being divided between the executive and the senate, the most satisfactory results in the negotiation of treaties are to be achieved through consideration and consultation between the departments concerned while negotiations are pending. President Wilson committed a grave error in utterly ignoring the senate when he undertook to commit the country to the German peace treaty to which he subscribed. President Harding adopts the wiser course which reasonably may be expected to result in agreements, if any are made in the forthcoming conference, which the senate can sanction.

It is expected that another senator will be chosen to sit with Messrs. Hughes and Lodge. There are predictions that Senator Underwood, leader of the minority, will be favored by the president. Selection of the Alabaman would be appropriate and in keeping with the Republican ideal of excluding partisanship from foreign affairs.

cure for you any book which is not on the shelves in Marshfield, from the university library. You can draw on the printed wisdom of the most illustrious men and women from the time of Chaucer to Ibanez, in literature, since technical and fiction writers of all ages.

"And all this is furnished at practically no cost when compared to the sixty-five dollars of an organization such as the Delphian movement.

"Marshfield women, also, are well organized for the development of higher education personal development and soial progress. They have The Women's Club, an organization well organized and functioning efficiently. It has existed here almost since the beginning of the town, having its origin in what was called the Ladies' Travel Class. There is the Fornightly Musical Club, noted especially for its excellent work, interesting programs, scientifically prepared programs, and also length of life. There is also the Junior Musical Club, working along the same lines as that of the older women, teaching much to the children and developing in them those things which all communities prize most, artistry.

"Respecting the attemped organizaion of clubs such as the Delphian Society, The Wisconsin Club Woman has the following to say:

"Study courses, lectures educational propositions to the right, to the left, camping on the door steps. Poor Mrs. Home Woman has just pledged sixty dollars for a set of universal knowlege without which she is a pitiful ignoramus, only to learn from the next doorstep orator that a ninety dollar course of reading will land her right into the midst of a highbrow circle with sacred opportunities accorded only the elect.

"She is volplaning back to earth when the secretary of the real educational proposition arrives. In this case, you are not hampered with books. You pledge yourself to meet twice a month, as follows: All the women, the intellectual women, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, will assemble in small groups for one hour to debate to discuss to operate on the questions propounded by some hazy organization. The plan for imparting the knowledge and the ability to carry on this brilliant salon is not easily discerned; the inspiration will come with the questions for which you pay on the installment plan. You are assured that women all over the country are "forming grups;" that in two years the women who have not embraced this cult will be hopelessly mired in ignorance.

"Club women of Wisconsin, remember when listening to the most plausible of these, that the Extension Courses of the University will give everything and more than any agency can offer and for much less money.

"The University is studying the needs of groups of the individuals."

STEVENS POINT MAN HAPPY

"Never felt better in my life," exclaimed George Mulkins, 211 Cemetery St., Stevens Point, Wis. "If it hadn't been for Kozak, however, I would still be suffering from Catarrh of the stomach, loss of appetite and all run down system. That wasn't all either. Pains in the sides, dizziness and spots flashing before my eyes were among my troubles. Kozak relieved these troubles, gave me a good appetite, helped to digest my food right and I sleep much better. I've gained at least a pound in weight so far. Kozak has done wonders for me and I highly recommend it."

In these days the western plains swarmed with these animals; even if we liberally discount what these men have told us of the abundance of buffaloes, we are inclined to believe that it must have been next to impossible to shoot off a rifle on the western plains without hitting a half dozen buffaloes.

In those days buffaloes and buffalo hunting were American institutions. The Europeans who came to look us over but dared not venture far enough into the Wild West to sight a herd of buffaloes, had not seen all of America. Let us hope that this animal continues to increase, so that in our school geographies we need no longer write under a picture of it the sad legend, "almost extinct."

HARDING'S WISE SELECTION.

President Harding's selection of Senator Cabot Lodge as a member of the American delegation to the disarmament conference was expected by people familiar with the president's practical devotion to principle. There has not been a little chortling among certain critics of the administration who thought they had discovered signs warranting a conclusion that the Massachusetts senator was to be snubbed in this connection. But it was foregone that there would be senatorial representation on the American delegation and the logical thing was to invite the chairman of the foreign relations committee to sit in the conference. There are other senators, members of that committee, notably well equipped by learning and experience to serve the nation in this important matter, but there will be no dissatisfaction on the part of any of them that the honor, which will entail intense labor, is to go to Mr. Lodge.

The Republican conception has been that there should be no partisanship in the consideration of foreign relations and that responsibility from them being divided between the executive and the senate, the most satisfactory results in the negotiation of treaties are to be achieved through consideration and consultation between the departments concerned while negotiations are pending. President Wilson committed a grave error in utterly ignoring the senate when he undertook to commit the country to the German peace treaty to which he subscribed. President Harding adopts the wiser course which reasonably may be expected to result in agreements, if any are made in the forthcoming conference, which the senate can sanction.

It is expected that another senator will be chosen to sit with Messrs. Hughes and Lodge. There are predictions that Senator Underwood, leader of the minority, will be favored by the president. Selection of the Alabaman would be appropriate and in keeping with the Republican ideal of excluding partisanship from foreign affairs.

cure for you any book which is not on the shelves in Marshfield, from the university library. You can draw on the printed wisdom of the most illustrious men and women from the time of Chaucer to Ibanez, in literature, since technical and fiction writers of all ages.

"And all this is furnished at practically no cost when compared to the sixty-five dollars of an organization such as the Delphian movement.

"Marshfield women, also, are well organized for the development of higher education personal development and soial progress. They have The Women's Club, an organization well organized and functioning efficiently. It has existed here almost since the beginning of the town, having its origin in what was called the Ladies' Travel Class. There is the Fornightly Musical Club, noted especially for its excellent work, interesting programs, scientifically prepared programs, and also length of life. There is also the Junior Musical Club, working along the same lines as that of the older women, teaching much to the children and developing in them those things which all communities prize most, artistry.

"Respecting the attemped organization of clubs such as the Delphian Society, The Wisconsin Club Woman has the following to say:

"Study courses, lectures educational propositions to the right, to the left, camping on the door steps. Poor Mrs. Home Woman has just pledged sixty dollars for a set of universal knowlege without which she is a pitiful ignoramus, only to learn from the next doorstep orator that a ninety dollar course of reading will land her right into the midst of a highbrow circle with sacred opportunities accorded only the elect.

"She is volplaning back to earth when the secretary of the real educational proposition arrives. In this case, you are not hampered with books. You pledge yourself to meet twice a month, as follows: All the women, the intellectual women, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, will assemble in small groups for one hour to debate to discuss to operate on the questions propounded by some hazy organization. The plan for imparting the knowledge and the ability to carry on this brilliant salon is not easily discerned; the inspiration will come with the questions for which you pay on the installment plan. You are assured that women all over the country are "forming grups;" that in two years the women who have not embraced this cult will be hopelessly mired in ignorance.

"Club women of Wisconsin, remember when listening to the most plausible of these; that the Extension Courses of the University will give everything and more than any agents can offer and for much less money.

"The University is studying the needs of groups of the individual, and is prepare to furnish any course of study at the lowest possible cost.

"Agents who claim that their special brand of education is endorsed by the Federation of Women's Clubs, that all club women are joining, are making misstatements. Do not go into study courses without investigation and comparison with those of our State University Extension Division.

"Never felt better in my life," exclaimed George Mulkins, 211 Cemetery St., Stevens Point, Wis. "If it hadn't been for Kozak, however, I would still be suffering from Catarrh of the stomach, loss of appetite and a run down system. That wasn't all either. Pains in the side, dizziness and spots flashing before my eyes were among my troubles. Kozak relieved these troubles, gave me a good appetite, helped to digest my food right and I sleep much better. I've gained at least a pound in weight so far. Kozak has done wonders for me and I highly recommend it."

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Jane Harding, respectable and conservative old spinster—but never too old to think of marriage—with more money than brains, is inveigled by a strong-minded spinster, Miss Higglesby-Browne, into financing an expedition to hunt for buried treasure on Leeward island. Her niece, Virginia Harding, undertaking to stop her, gets on the vessel engaged for the hunt, and in the confusion is unwillingly carried along.

CHAPTER II.—By no means concealing her distaste for the expedition and her contempt for its members, Virginia makes the acquaintance of the Honorable Cuthbert Vane, and is somewhat impressed.

CHAPTER III.—Talking with Dugald Shaw, the leader of the expedition, Virginia very frankly expresses her views, practically accusing Shaw and the other members of the party, including a somewhat uncertain personage, Captain Magnus, and a shady "financier," Hamilton H. Tubbs, of being in a conspiracy to defraud Miss Jane Harding. Their relations, naturally, are somewhat strained.

CHAPTER IV.—Landing on the island is a matter of some difficulty, Virginia being carried ashore in the arms of Cuthbert Vane, to her disquietude. The landing, however, is safely effected.

CHAPTER V.—Led by Miss Higglesby-Browne, the party draws up an agreement whereby Virginia Harding is barred from participation in the profits of the expedition. Believing the whole thing to be a fraud, Virginia is not greatly worried. Cuthbert Vane alone votes against the exclusion of Virginia.

What with the genius of Cookie and the fruitfulness of our island, not to speak of supplies from the Army and Navy stores, we lived like sybarites. There were fish from stream and sea, coconuts and bananas and oranges from the trees in the clearing. I had hopes of yams and breadfruit also, but if they grew on Leeward none of us had a speaking acquaintance with them. Cookie did wonders with the pigs that were shot and brought in to him, though I never could sit down with appetite to a massacred infant served up on a platter, which is just what little pigs look like.

"Jes' yo' cas' yo' eye on dis yere innocent," Cookie would request, as he placed the suckling before Mr. Tubbs. "Tendah as a new'b'o'n babe, he am. Jes' lak he been tucked up to sleep by his mammy. Sho' now, how yo' got de heart to stick de knife in him, Misah Tubbs?"

It was significant that Mr. Tubbs, after occupying for a day or two an undistinguished middle place at the board, had somehow slid into the carver's post at the head of the table. Flanking him were the two ladies. Everybody else had a sense of sitting in outer darkness, particularly I, whom fate had placed opposite Captain Magnus. Since landing on the island, Captain Magnus had forsworn the effeminacy of forks. Loaded to the hilt, his knife would approach his cavernous mouth and disappear in it. Yet when it emerged Captain Magnus was alive. Where did it go? This was a question that agitated me daily.

The history of Captain Magnus was obscure. It was certain that he had his captain's papers, though how he had mastered the science of navigation sufficiently to obtain them was a problem. Though he held a British navigator's license, he did not appear to be an Englishman.

The captain, as Mr. Vane had remarked, was Miss Browne's own find. Before the objections of Mr. Shaw—evidently a Negative Influence from the beginning—had caused her to abandon the scheme, Miss Browne had planned to charter a vessel in New York and sail around the Horn to the island. While nursing this project she had formed an extensive acquaintance with persons frequenting the New York water-front, among whom was Captain Magnus. As I heard her remark, he was the one nautical character whom she found sympathetic, by which I judge that the others were skeptical and rude. Being sympathetic, Captain Magnus found it an easy matter to attach himself to the expedition—or perhaps it was Violet who annexed him. I don't know which.

It was fortunate that Cookie knew nothing of the solitary grave somewhere on the island, with its stone marked with B. H. and a cross-bones, nor that the inhabitant thereof was supposed to walk. If he had, I think the strange spectacle of a lone negro in a small boat rowing lustily for the American continent might soon have been witnessed on the Pacific by any eyes that were there to see. And we could ill have spared either boat or cook.

Yet even though unvexed by this gruesome knowledge, after two or three days I noticed that Cookie was ill at ease. As the leisure member of the party, I enjoyed more of Cookie's society than the rest. On this occasion, while the morning was still in its freshness he was permitting me to make fudge. But his usual joviality was gone. I saw that he glanced over his shoulder at intervals, muttering softly to himself. Also that a rabbit's foot was slung conspicuously about his neck.

Having made my fudge and set the pan on a stone in the stream to cool, I was about to retire with a view to conducting a limited exploring expedition of my own. The assurances of Mr. Shaw—not personally directed to me, of course; the armed truce under which we lived did not permit of that—had convinced me that I had not to dread anything more ferocious than the pigs, and the wildest of them would retire before a stick or a stone. Besides, I boasted a little automatic, which I carried strapped to my waist in a businesslike manner. Mr. Vane had almost got me to the point where I could shoot it off without shutting my eyes.

Thus equipped, I was about to set off into the woods. I had turned my back on Cookie and the camp, when I was arrested by an exclamation:

"Miss Jinny!"

I turned to find Cookie gazing after me with an expression which, in the familiar phrase of fiction, I could not interpret, though among its ingredients were doubt and anguish. Cookie, too, looked pale. I don't in the least know how he managed it, but that was the impression he conveyed, dusky as he was.

"Miss Jinny, ir mos' look lak yo' 'bout to go perambulatin' in dese yere woods?"

"I am, Cookie," I admitted.

The whites of Cookie's eyes became alarmingly conspicuous. Drawing near in a stealthy manner he whispered:

"Yo' bettah not, Miss Jinny!"

"Oh, nonsense, Cookie!" I said impatiently. "There's not a thing on the island but the pigs!"

"Miss Jinny," he solemnly replied, "dey's pigs and pigs."

"Yes, but pigs is pigs, you know," I answered, laughing.

"Dey's pigs and pigs, chile—live ones and—dead ones."

"Dead ones? Of course—haven't we been eating them?"

"Yo' won't nevah eat dis yere kind o' dead pig, Miss Jinny. It's—it's a ha'nt!"

The murder was out. Cookie leaned against a cocoa-palm and wiped his ebon brow.

Persistently questioned, he told at last how, today and yesterday, arising in the dim dawn to build his fire before the camp was stirring, he had seen lurking at the edge of the clearing a white four-footed shape. It was a pig, yet not a pig: its ghostly hue, its noiseless movements, divided it from all proper mundane porkers by the dreadful gulf which divides the living from the dead. The first morning Cookie, doubtful of his senses, had flung a stone and the spectral Thing had vanished like a shadow. On its second appearance, having had a day and a night for meditation, he had known better than to commit such an outrage upon the possessor of ghostly powers, and had resorted to prayer instead. This had answered quite as well, for the phantom pig had dissolved like the morning mists. While the sun blazed, what with his devotions and his rabbit's foot and a cross of twigs nailed to a tree, Cookie felt a fair degree of security. But his teeth chattered in his head at the thought of approaching night. Meanwhile he could not in conscience permit me to venture forth into the path of this horror, which might, for all we knew, be lurking in the jungle shadows, even through the daylight hours. Also, though he did not avow this motive, I believe he found my company very reassuring. It is immensely easier to face a ghost in the sustaining presence of other flesh and blood.

For a moment I wavered in my determination. What if the island had its wild creatures after all? But neither lynx nor panther nor any other beast of prey is white, except a polar bear, and it would be unusual to meet one on a tropical island.

I decided that Cookie's pig was after all a pig, though still in the flesh. I thought I remembered having seen quite fair pigs, which would pass for white with a frightened negro in the dim light of dawn. I consoled Cookie as best I could by promising to cross my fingers if I heard or saw anything suspicious, and struck out into the woods.

For all my brave words to Cookie, I had no intention of going very far afield. From the shore of the cove I had observed that the ground behind the clearing rose to the summit of a low ridge, perhaps four hundred feet in height, which jutted from the base of the peak. From this ridge I thought I might see something more of the island than the limited environment of Lantern bay.

COULD SAVE MANY BARRELS OF OIL BY LESS WASTE

NEW METHODS NOW UNDER INVESTIGATION ARE WARRANTED TO SAVE 3,000,000 BARRELS A YEAR.

Lawrence, Kan., Aug. 15—Millions of barrels of oil may be saved annually in the Mid-continent field alone through the elimination of wasteful practices, as the result of a survey of the Kansfias and Oklahoma oil industry now under way by a committeee of the American Society of Mechanical ngineers.

P. E. Walker, dean of the school of engineering at the University of Kansan here, is chairman of this committee. Hollis Porter, of the Gypsy Oil Company, and Philip other members of the committee. Jones of Shreveport, La., are the other members of the committee, which is working in co-operation with J. P. Fisher and J. E. Stillwell of the research department of the Empire Oil Company, Bartlesville, Okla.

Electricity of Use

Methods for reducing the amount of good oil and gas burned in the process of refining, for example, are being worked out. Two or three million barrels could be saved each year in this process, according to Dean Walker.

Electrical methods for the recovery of much oil which is otherwise allowed to run to waste because it is mixed with water and other foreign substances, are already saving annually from four to five million barrels in the United States as a whole, he said.

On one lease alone the operator reported more than $40,000 worth of gasoline reclaimed in one year by the introduction of a plan to prevent evaporation from open tanks. Failure to use these methods is declared to be causing much loss, both in gasoline and money.

Other research along similar lines is being carried on in the laboratories of the University of Kansas under Dean Walker's direction. Investigation of the thermal properties of oil for the purpose of making it possible to design refining stills just as scientifically as a water boiler is designed, instead of by guess work, is one of the most important of these problems.

Another investigation of value to the oil industry of Kansas, which is being carried on at the K. U., is the determination of the laws governing the flow of oil through pipe lines of various sizes. Arrangements have been made with various companies for a test of the results found in the laboratories by the use of sections of the pipe lines actually in operation.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—Jane Harding, respectable and conservative old spinster—but never too old to think of marriage—with more money than brains, is inveigled by a strong-minded spinster, Miss Higglesby-Browne, into financing an expedition to hunt for buried treasure on Leeward Island. Her niece, Virginia Harding, undertaking to stop her, gets on the vessel engaged for the hunt, and in the confusion is unwillingly carried along.

CHAPTER II.—By no means concealing her distaste for the expedition and her contempt for its members, Virginia makes the acquaintance of the Honorable Cuthbert Vane, and is somewhat impressed.

CHAPTER III.—Talking with Dugald Shaw, the leader of the expedition, Virginia very frankly expresses her views, practically accusing Shaw and the other members of the party, including a somewhat uncertain personage, Captain Magnus, and a shady "financier," Hamilton H. Tubbs, of being in a conspiracy to defraud Miss Jane Harding. Their relations, naturally, are somewhat strained.

CHAPTER IV.—Landing on the island is a matter of some difficulty, Virginia being carried ashore in the arms of Cuthbert Vane, to her disquietude. The landing, however, is safely effected.

CHAPTER V.—Led by Miss Higglesby-Browne, the party draws up an agreement whereby Virginia Harding is barred from participation in the profits of the expedition. Believing the whole thing to be a fraud, Virginia is not greatly worried. Cuthbert Vane alone votes against the exclusion of Virginia.

What with the genius of Cookie and the fruitfulness of our island, not to speak of supplies from the Army and Navy stores, we lived like sybarites. There were fish from stream and sea, coconuts and bananas and oranges from the trees in the clearing. I had hopes of yams and breadfruit also, but if they grew on Leeward none of us had a speaking acquaintance with them. Cookie did wonders with the pigs that were shot and brought in to him, though I never could sit down with appetite to a massacred infant served up on a platter, which is just what little pigs look like.

"Jes' yo' cas' yo' eye on dis yere innabeent," Cookie would request, as he placed the suckling before Mr. Tubbs. "Tendah as a new'bo'n babe, he am. Jes' luk he been tucked up to sleep by his mammy. Sho' now, how yo' got de heart to stick de knife in him, Mistah Tubbs?"

It was significant that Mr. Tubbs, after occupying for a day or two an undistinguished middle place at the board, had somehow slid into the carver's post at the head of the table. Flanking him were the two ladies. Everybody else had a sense of sitting in outer darkness, particularly I, whom fate had placed opposite Captain Magnus. Since landing on the island, Captain Magnus had forsworn the effeminacy of forks. Loaded to the hilt, his knife would approach his cavernous mouth and disappear in it. Yet when it emerged Captain Magnus was alive. Where did it go? This was a question that agitated me daily.

The history of Captain Magnus was obscure. It was certain that he had his captain's papers, though how he had mastered the science of navigation sufficiently to obtain them was a problem. Though he held a British navigator's license, he did not appear to be an Englishman.

The captain, as Mr. Vane had remarked, was Miss Browne's own find. Before the objections of Mr. Shaw—evidently a Negative Influence from the beginning—had caused her to abandon the scheme, Miss Browne had planned to charter a vessel in New York and sail around the Horn to the island. While nursing this project she had formed an extensive acquaintance with persons frequenting the New York water-front, among whom was Captain Magnus. As I heard her remark, he was the one nautical character whom she found sympathetic, by which I judge that the others were skeptical and rude. Being sympathetic, Captain Magnus found it an easy matter to attach himself to the expedition—or perhaps it was Violet who annexed him, I don't know which.

It was fortunate that Cookie knew nothing of the solitary grave somewhere on the island, with its stone marked with B. H. and a cross-bones, nor that the inhabitant thereof was supposed to walk. If he had, I think the strange spectacle of a lone negro in a small boat rowing lustily for the American continent might soon have been witnessed on the Pacific by any eyes that were there to see. And we could ill have spared either boat or cook.

Yet even though unvexed by this grewsome knowledge, after two or three days I noticed that Cookie was ill at ease. As the leisure member of the party, I enjoyed more of Cookie's society than the rest. On this occasion while the morning was still in its freshness he was permitting me to make fudge. But his usual joviality was gone. I saw that he glanced over his shoulder at intervals, muttering darkly to himself. Also that a rabbit's foot was slung conspicuously about his neck.

DOINGS OF THE DUFFS BY ALLMAN

Having made my fudge and set the pan on a stone in the stream to cool, I was about to retire with a view to conducting a limited exploring expedition of my own. The assurances of Mr. Shaw—not personally directed to me, of course; the armed truce under which we lived did not permit of that—had convinced me that I had not to dread anything more ferocious than the pigs, and the wildest of them would retire before a stick or a stone. Besides, I boasted a little automatic, which I carried strapped to my waist in a businesslike manner. Mr. Vane had almost got me to the point where I could shoot it off without shutting my eyes.

Thus equipped, I was about to set off into the woods. I had turned my back on Cookie and the camp, when I was arrested by an exclamation:

"Miss Jinny!"

I turned to find Cookie gazing after me with an expression which, in the familiar phrase of fiction, I could not interpret, though among its ingredients were doubt and anguish. Cookie, too, looked pale. I don't in the least know how he managed it, but that was the impression he conveyed, dusky as he was.

"Miss Jinny, it mos' look lak yo' 'bout to go perambulatin' in dese yere woods?"

"I am, Cookie," I admitted.

The whites of Cookie's eyes became alarmingly conspicuous. Drawing near in a stealthy manner he whispered:

"Yo' bettah not, Miss Jinny!"

"Oh, nonsense, Cookie!" I said impatiently. "There's not a thing on the island but the pigs!"

"Miss Jinny," he solemnly replied, "dey's pigs and pigs."

"Yes, but pigs is pigs, you know," I answered, laughing.

"Dey's pigs and pigs, chile—live ones and—dead ones."

"Dead ones? Of course—haven't we been eating them?"

"Yo' won't nevah eat dis yere kind o' dead pig, Miss Jinny. It's—it's a ha'nt!"

The murder was out. Cookie leaned against a cocoa-palm and wiped his ebon brow.

Persistently questioned, he told at last how, today and yesterday, arising in the dim dawn to build his fire before the camp was stirring, he had seen lurking at the edge of the clearing a white four-footed shape. It was a pig, yet not a pig; its ghostly hue, its noiseless movements, divided it from all proper mundane porkers by the dreadful gulf which divides the living from the dead. The first morning Cookie, doubtful of his senses, had flung a stone and the spectral Thing had vanished like a shadow. On its second appearance, having had a day and a night for meditation, he had known better than to commit such an outrage upon the possessor of ghostly powers, and had resorted to prayer instead. This had answered quite as well, for the phantom pig had dissolved like the morning mists. While the sun blazed, what with his devotions and his rabbit's foot and a cross of twigs nailed to a tree, Cookie felt a fair degree of security. But his teeth chattered in his head at the thought of approaching night. Meanwhile he could not in conscience permit me to venture forth into the path of this horror, which might, for all we knew, be lurking in the jungle shadows, even through the daylight hours. Also, though he did not avow this motive, I believe he found my company very reassuring. It is immensely easier to face a ghost in the sustaining presence of other flesh and blood.

For a moment I wavered in my determination. What if the island had its wild creatures after all? But neither lynx nor panther nor any other beast of prey is white, except a polar bear, and it would be unusual to meet one on a tropical island.

I decided that Cookie's pig was after all a pig, though still in the flesh. I thought I remembered having seen quite fair pigs, which would pass for white with a frightened negro in the dim light of dawn. I consoled Cookie as best I could by promising to cross my fingers if I heard or saw anything suspicious, and struck out into the woods.

For all my brave words to Cookie, I had no intention of going very far afield. From the shore of the cove I had observed that the ground behind the clearing rose to the summit of a low ridge, perhaps four hundred feet in height, which jutted from the base of the peak. From this ridge I thought I might see something more of the island than the limited environment of Lantern bay.

COULD SAVE MANY BARRELS OF OIL BY LESS WASTE

NEW METHODS NOW UNDER INVESTIGATION ARE WARRANTED TO SAVE 3,000,000 BARRELS A YEAR.

Lawrence, Kan., Aug. 15—Millions of barrels of oil may be saved annually in the Mid-continent field alone through the elimination of wasteful practices, as the result of a survey of the Kansas and Oklahoma oil industry now under way by a committeee of the American Society of Mechanical ngineers.

P. E. Walker, dean of the school of engineering at the University of Kansan here, is chairman of this committee. Hollis Porter, of the Gypsy Oil Company, and Philip other members of the committee, Jones of Shreveport, La., are the other members of the committee, which is working in co-operation with J. P. Fisher and J. E. Stillwell of the research department of the Empire Oil Company, Bartlesville, Oklu.

Electricity of Use

Methods for reducing the amount of good oil and gas burned in the process of refining, for example, are being worked out. Two or three million barrels could be saved each year in this process, according to Dean Walker.

Electrical methods for the recovery of much oil which is otherwise allowed to run to waste because it is mixed with water and other foreign substances, are already saving annually from four to five million barrels in the United States as a whole, he said.

On one lease alone the operator reported more than $40,000 worth of gasoline reclaimed in one year by the introduction of a plan to prevent evaporation from open tanks. Failure to use these methods is declared to be causing much loss, both in gasoline and money.

Other research along similar lines is being carried on in the laboratories of the University of Kansas under Dean Walker's direction. Investigation of the thermal properties of oil for the purpose of making it possible to design refining stills just as scientifically as a water boiler is designed, instead of by guess work, is one of the most important of these problems.

Another investigation of value to the oil industry of Kansas, which is being carried on at the K. U., is the determination of the laws governing the flow of oil through pipe lines of various sizes. Arrangements have been made with various companies for a test of the results found in the laboratories by the use of sections of the pipe lines actually in operation.

DRAWBACKS IN HIS VACATION

Champion Willie Hoppe May Not Play Tennis, Golf, Bowl, Baseball, or Pick a Banjo.

Vacation time doesn't mean as much to Willie Hoppe, world's champion billiardist, as it does to Mr. and Mrs. Average Citizen.

not aim a cue, he gets the jack. That sounds fine, but—

There is a vacation drawback in the things the insurance policy forbids him to do. It reads that he cannot:

Play tennis, play golf, bowl, play catch with a baseball or pick a banjo or mandolin.

"Guess I'll have to go swimming," says Hoppe.

Brooklyn — Cincinnati bunched eight hits off Cadore in three innings on Monday and defeated Brooklyn, 7 to 5. Krueger drove in three runs with a homer in the leftfield bleachers in the second and started a vain rally with a double in the ninth. Olson played a brilliant game at short.

New York—Excellent pitching by Perrica and home runs by McHenry and Hornsby enabled St. Louis to defeat New York on Monday, 6 to 0. Perrica allowed the Giants three hits. McHenry's drive was made in the first inning with two on base and Hornsby's in the fifth with one on.

Boston—Pittsburg hit McQuillan and Scott hard in the early innings and defeated Boston, 10 to 8, on Monday. Although Boston drove Hamilton and Zinn out of the box, the score was 9 to 0, in favor of the league leaders in the sixth.

Philadelphia—Cy Williams' home run drive over the right field wall in the twelfth inning gave Philadelphia a 2 to 1 victory over Chicago on Monday. Chicago's lone run came in the fifth as the result of Winters' pass, given to Maisel, and a wild throw by Parkinson.

GETTING RID OF BRIGHT'S DISEASE

(Tuesday Health Talk No. 41.)
By W. C. Weirick, D. C.

The coming on of Bright's disease is always gradual. The first indication is usually puffiness of the eyelids, weakness and general ill health. The urine is scanty, highly colored, and contains albumen. As the dropsical condition increases, it interferes with respiration and requires the sufferer to keep an erect position.

This disease is caused by a disturbance of the spinal joints at what is called "kidney place." In severe cases, such as Bright's disease, the misalignment of the "kidney place" joint is so great as to cause practically a paralysis of the kidneys. Instead of disposing of waste, the kidneys become inactive, and the wastes poison the body. Chiropractic spinal adjustments bring back a normal action of the kidneys and that means a disappearance of the dropsical conditions and a general return to health.

They Found Recovery Through Adjustments

"From 212 I dropped to 168 pounds. Two specialists called it Bright's Disease. After taking chiropractic for two months I was again able to do my farm work."—John Briney, Chiropractic Research Bureau, Statement No. 1257.

"I was down and out with kidney trouble for nine years. The doctors said Bright's Disease and gave me up for dead. After six weeks with Chiropractic I went back on the road, a well man."—P. B. Corns, Chiropractic Research Bureau, Statement No. 1252.

"Billowy"

There is no question about the atavistic tendency in the butterfly taffeta gown designed by Mme. Thurn. It certainly harks back to grandmother's days. The skirt which is ankle-length is very full and billows about the ankles. It looks almost like an inverted flower. The silk is cut in big petals and flowers of the taffeta are appliqued. The waist is round and has short, lacy sleeves.

THEATRES

IDEAL THEATRE

There isn't a thing missing in "One Man in a Million," the Paramount-Artcraft super-special release in which George Beban, the great American character actor, appears in his stellar role. In all of the cities throughout the country where the picture has been shown, critics have declared it to be the greatest of screen dramas. This big photoplay will be shown at the Ideal Theatre tonight and Wednesday night.

The story is one of human interest with a strong series of comedy relief. Mr. Beban has shown his versatilities in this picture first having written the story and later producing and directing it. In the stellar role Mr. Beban is seen in his now familiar and much loved character of the humble Italian who teaches a worldly human lesson through the medium of a big and kind heart. The author has collied to his aid many clever dogs and an almost human parrot to bring home the story of the picture.

With Mr. Beban in the supporting cast is George Beban, Jr., his five year old son, who will undoubtedly be as great a thespian as his illustrious daddy. Others in the cast are Helen Jerome Eddy, Irene Rich, Lillian Whitlock, George Williams, Willis Lee and Wade Boteler.

PALACE THEATRE

There is something very humorous in the disappointment experienced when you don't happen to be the one who is sitting next to two very famous German spies have been appearing in the North Section of Central Sunday. The happy man out of thousands is with Mary's alleged uncle, their old man, the whole French army and dynamite have an important role. The kids were good sports, but every time the old boy gets a nasty jolt from three or four pounds of [illegible] dynamite and the kids are [illegible] terrified.

These little kids are like the four terrible Bolsheviks who entered the home of Jimmy Stanhope one night with a very efficient time bomb, gagged and tied Jimmy in his chair, placed the little toy at his feet, and lectured into his face. You can imagine Jimmy's feelings at the time. They didn't mean any harm from a Russian standpoint, they were only going to blow Jimmy out of his chair for making [illegible]

The four of them were so pleased with the success of their undertaking they immediately made steps for the cellar, leaving one Red who wasn't so thirsty to watch Jimmy. A well-trained cellar sniffer, who was one of the party, located a case of ten year old high-powered grapejuice, and the fun began.

Had these four men been Frenchmen instead of Russians, they would have "sought the woman"—but instead they were drinking blissfully when Mary awakened from her sleep, came downstairs and, OH BOY, the FUN DID BEGIN, as you will witness when "The Perfect Woman," starring Constance Talmadge, comes to the Palace, Wednesday and Thursday.

"Billowy"

There is no question about the atavistic tendency in the butterfly taffeta gown designed by Mme. Thurn. It certainly harks back to grandmother's days. The skirt which is ankle-length is very full and billows about the ankles. It looks almost like an inverted flower. The silk is cut in big petals and flowers of the taffeta are appliqued. The waist is round and has short lacy sleeves.

THEATRES

IDEAL THEATRE

There isn't a thing missing in "One Man in a Million," the latest Robertson-Cole super-special release in which George Beban, the great American character actor, appears in the stellar role. In all of the cities throughout the country where the picture has been shown, critics have declared it to be the greatest of screen dramas. This big photoplay will be shown at the Ideal Theatre tonight and Wednesday night.

The story is one of human interest with a strong series of comedy relieffs. Mr. Beban has shown his capabilities in this picture first having written the story and later producing and directing it. In the stellar role Mr. Beban is seen in his now familiar and much loved character of an humble Italian who teaches a really human lesson through the medium of a big and kind heart. The author has called to his aid many clever dogs and an almost human parrot to bring home the story of the picture.

With Mr. Beban in the supporting cast is George Beban, Jr., his five year old son, who will undoubtedly be as great a thespian as his illustrious daddy. Others in the cast are Helen Jerome Eddy, Irene Rich, Lloyd Whitlock, George Williams, Jennie Lee and Wade Boteler.

PALACE THEATRE

There is something very humorous about a time-bomb, providing that you don't happen to be the one who is sitting over it. For more than a decade two very famous German Kids have been appearing in the Comic Section of certain Sunday Newspapers amusing thousands with pranks played upon their old man, in which firecrackers and dynamite have an important role. The Kids never grow older, but every week the old boy gets a nasty jolt from three or four pounds of misapplied dynamite, and the kids are soundly thrashed.

Those little kids are like the four terrible Bolshevists who entered the home of Jimmy Stanhope one night with a very efficient time bomb, gagged and tied Jimmy in his chair, placed the little toy at his feet and leered into his face. You can imagine Jimmy's feelings at the time. They didn't mean any harm from a Russian standpoint, they were only going to blow Jimmy out of his chair for making some "very" pertinent remarks about the Lenine and Trotsky regime.

The four of them were so pleased with the success of their undertaking they immediately made steps for the cellar, leaving one Red who wasn't so thirsty to watch Jimmy. A well-trained cellar sniffer, who was one of the party, located a case of ten year old high-powered grapejuice, and the fun began.

Had these four men been Frenchmen instead of Russians, they would have "sought the woman"—but instead they were drinking blissfully, when Mary awakened from her sleep, came downstairs and, OH BOY, the FUN DID BEGIN, as you will witness when "The Perfect Woman," starring Constance Talmadge, comes to the Palace, Wednesday and Thursday.

RECALL RECORD RUNS OF ANCIENT DIXIE ENGINES

LOCOMOTIVE 210 OF THE PLANT SYSTEM HOLDS WORLD SPEED RECORD OF 120 MILES AND HOUR MADE IN 1901.

Jacksonville, Fla.—Exhibition of the old DeWitt Clinton locomotive and the celebrated New York Central 999 in Chicago's Pageant of Progress Exposition, recalls to southern railroad men some of the record breaking runs made below the Mason and Dixon line.

The world's record of 999-112½ miles an hour stood unbroken until locomotive 210 of the old Plant system eclipsed it in 1901 with five miles in two and a half minutes, putting the speed record up to 120 miles an hour. This made on a run between Savannah and Jacksonville.

But as early as 1894 southern railroad men say they made a remarkable record in running a special train over several connecting lines between Jacksonville and Washington.

Special Made Fast Time

The distance traversed was 789.5 miles. In spite of its taking two hours and fifty-nine minutes to cover the 119 miles between Richmond and Washington, the special arrived in Washington 15 hours and 49 minutes after it left Jacksonville. The light equipment of 30 years ago contributed to making the record remarkable.

The occasion was a trip of Florida Knights of Pythias to Washington for their national conclave. When they requested a special train from Jacksonville, officials of the Plant System and Atlantic Coast Line saw an opportunity for a record. Preparations were surrounded with secrecy, as the railroad men were anxious to keep news of the proposed run from a combination of competing railroads, which had a record of 19 hours 20 minutes.

The train was composed of one combination car, one coach and two sleepers, with a combined weight of 242,200 pounds unloaded. The five locomotives assigned to handle it over five different railroads between Jacksonville and Richmond were similar as to weight and construction.

The special left Jacksonville at 4:20 p. m. Eastern time, August 26. In its first lap it made its fastest time, clipping off a mile near Savannah in 48 seconds or at 75 miles an hour. It arrived in Washington at 3:09 a. m., Aug. 27.

After a 36 minutes stop several passengers boarding a regular train arrived in New York at 2:30 p. m. 22 hours and ten minutes after leaving Jacksonville.

Each of the five locomotives that handled the train between Jacksonville and Richmond is still in service on the Atlantic Coast Line, which absorbed the Plant System seven years later.

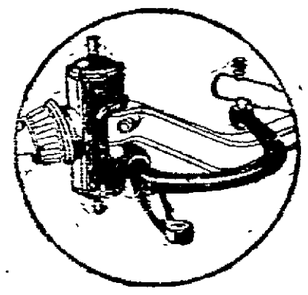
WILLYS-KNIGHT



The efficiency and safety of this simple forged steel steering knuckle is typical of the detail refinement of the Willys-Knight car.

A Car At Home With Republicans, Democrats and Kings!

It is so simple that repairs are almost never needed—and when they are, any mechanic anywhere can make them economically.

Its oiling system is so perfect in all temperatures that there is practically no wear on its sleeve valves after tens of thousands of miles.

Its patented sleeve valve motor is manufactured on license by only a few manufacturers in America and the finest motor car builders of Europe.

It has no cams, no springs, no valves to grind—no parts that weaken. It grows more powerful with use.

The car in every detail is built to reflect the economy and dependability of the motor.
